How this guy managed to keep his position for so long is beyond me. However, it seems that new allegations about payments made to friends as "advisors" is finally causing him to go.

The sooner the better. London needs somebody who can stand up to the well funded political correctness industry that's dragging the city down. At least the Newt Licker and his bunch of corrupt pals have been binned so if Blair is replaced with somebody who actually knows how to do a police person's job there's hope for the city even at this late stage of decay.
