Rangers have bought their entire ticket allocation for the away leg of the Uefa Cup tie with Sporting Lisbon and will give them out free to 2,500 supporters based on their previous travel history.

They are showing a bit of loyalty to their travelling support,unlike the SFA who are charging 25 quid a skull for the Croatia friendly

Aww and the poor diddums are whinging that they have too many games to play.....:dry:

Thats what comes with success, i didn't see the SFA or the Hu...i mean Rangers being overly helpful when Celtic were in the UEFA cup final with other fixtures.

Never mind i think 40 grand a week softens the blow bit eh.....:S

I'll wish them all the luck in the world and I'm not a Rangers fan.

(Then again, maybe I just want to bask in reflected glory B))

Good luck, Guys!!

Well done that 'Keeper. What a save that was at the penalties! He really kept his nerve.

I'm kind of down as I'm a Liverpool supporter and still recovering from Wednesday's disappointment in the Champions League. Still it could have been worse. We could have beaten Chelsea and then lost to "them" in the final and some things are just not to be contemplated! Still, the red wine helped :cheer:
